CYNYNION is a township in the parish of Oswestry, and with a portion of the parishes of Llanillin, Selattyn, and Llan-y-blodwel forms the consolidated ecclesiastical district of Rhyd-y-Croesau; it is in the hundred, county court district, and union of Oswestry, rural deanery of Llangollen, archdeaconry and bishopric of St. Asaph, 3½ miles south-west from Oswestry. It lies in a bleak and mountainous district, on the verge of the county adjoining Denbighshire, and contains 760 acres of land, mostly the property of Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, Bart., M.P., who is also lord of the manor. The church, situated at the Lawnt, is a small fabric of stone, with a square tower, and was consecrated in the year 1838; divine service is conducted alternately in the Welsh and English languages. The living is a perpetual curacy, value £80 per annum, with residence and a small portion of glebe land, in the gift of the Bishop of St. Asaph; the incumbent is the Rev. Robert Williams, M.A., of Christ Church, Oxford. A National school, in the Gothic style of architecture, was built by public subscription in 1850, and is supported by voluntary contributions. The population in 1861 was 328, chiefly Welsh.

PANDY is a farm.

DAWLEY, or DAWLEY MAGNA, is a very extensive parish, comprising the townships of DAWLEY (or Dawley Magna), LITTLE DAWLEY (or Dawley Parva), and MALINSLEE, 4 miles south-east from Wellington (its post, petty sessions, and polling town), about 2½ from Madeley (its poor-law union town), and 5 from Shiffnal, in Wellington division, South Bradford hundred, Madeley union and county court district, North Shropshire, rural deanery of Shiffnal, Salop archdeaconry, and Lichfield bishopric; it is situated on the turnpike road leading from Wellington to Bridgnorth. The church of the Holy Trinity is a handsome Gothic building of freestone, erected in 1845; it has tower with 5 bells, nave, transept, porch, chancel, a font and organ. The register dates back to 1600. The living is a perpetual curacy, value £150 yearly, with residence, in the gift of Revell Phillips, Esq., and others; the Rev. William Richards, M.A., of Queen's College, Oxford, is the incumbent. There are places of worship for Wesleyans, Baptists, New Connexion and Primitive Methodists—in all seven chapels. There are two excellent schools for boys and girls—one on the British and one on the National principle. There are a small library, a police station, and a savings bank; the latter is open the fourth Monday in every month. The gasworks belong to the Dawley Gas Company, and are situate near to Chapel-lane. A fair is held yearly, on the 4th of June, for horses, cattle, and live stock. The market day is every Saturday, for the sale of meat, vegetables, and provisions, and is very well attended. The Coalbrook Dale Company carry on extensive coal and iron works in the parish, and give employment to about 2,000 hands. The works at Horse Hay are the forges and rolling-mills of the Coalbrook Dale Company, whose foundries and chief office are at the adjacent hamlet of Coalbrook Dale; they were commenced in 1755; but upon the introduction into England, at the close of the last century, of rolling iron, by Mr. Henry Cort, they were very considerably enlarged, and the rolling-mill was set up; about 15,000 tons of finished iron, in bars of great variety of sizes and sections, and in plates for shipbuilding or mechanical purposes, are annually made there. The furnaces which produce the necessary quantity of pig-iron are not distant, two being at Horsehay, two at Dawley Castle, one in the neighbouring township of Lawley, and two in the adjoining parish of Dawley Parva. From the surrounding collieries the requisite supplies of coal and ironstone are raised. The Coalbrook Dale Company received medals for superiority of manufacture from both the London Exhibition of 1851 and the Paris Exhibition of 1855. The Pool Hill British schools were erected in 1844, for the instruction of the children of the workpeople; they comprise a boys', girls', and infants' school, which now contain about 400 children, and they are under the supervision of her Majesty's Inspectors of Schools. Beriah Botfield, Esq., M.P., has an extensive mill and forge with mines and collieries in Stretchley parish; the principal office being at the Dark Lane. The population of the whole parish was 11,013; the acreage is 2,625. The soil is various. The minerals are ironstone and coal. Captain William Kenyon Slaney (who is lord of the manor) and the Coalbrook Dale Company are chief landowners in Dawley township. There is a charity of £7, distributed to the poor on St. Thomas's-day.

LITTLE DAWLEY, or Dawley Parva, is a township and new parish, adjoining Dawley, and taken out of the parish of Dawley, and forming a new parish for ecclesiastical purposes under the late Sir Robert Peel's Act; it is in South Bradford hundred, Madeley union and county court district, northern division of Salop, rural deanery of Shiffnal, Salop archdeaconry, and Lichfield bishopric. The church of St. Luke is a neat brick building, erected in 1845, in the Norman style of architecture; it has small stone tower, nave, centre aisle, porch, chancel, 1 bell, and a font. The living is a perpetual curacy, value £150 yearly, with residence and half an acre of glebe land, in the gift of the Crown and bishop alternately; the Rev. James Morris, B.A., of St. Catherine's College, Cambridge, is the incumbent. The population in 1861 was 2,451; the area is 900a. 1r. 38p. The soil is various; the subsoil is clay. The minerals are coal and ironstone. The Earl of Craven was lord of the manor and sole landowner; but the property has recently been divided into sections and sold.

MALINSLEE is a township and ecclesiastical district taken out of the parish of Dawley. It is in South Bradford hundred, Madeley union and county court district, northern division of Salop, Salop archdeaconry, and Lichfield bishopric, rural deanery of Shiffnal. Malinslee adjoins Dawley. The church of St. Leonard is an octagonal building of freestone, erected in the year 1805, in the Roman style of architecture; it has a porch, tower containing 3 bells, clock, font, &c. The living is a perpetual curacy, value £200 yearly, with residence and about half an acre of glebe land, in the gift of the incumbent of Dawley; the Rev. William Harris, of St. David's College, Lampeter, is the incumbent. Here are the remains of an ancient chapel. The soil is loamy; the subsoil is gravelly. The minerals are coal and ironstone. The population of the township and district in 1861 was 4,637. R. H. Cheney, Esq., and others, are owners of this township. There are charities of £1 6s. 10d. yearly value.
